FOUR WEEKS IN CHARGE

PRIVATE

Of the Marine Station Saw
Three Men Beating
Sutton

AND HEARD FOUR SHOTS RING
OUT ON THE NIGHT OF THE TRAGEDY.

ENTIRELY NEW STORY
OF THE WHOLE AFFAIR

BY YOUTH FROM NORFOLK WHO WAS NOT PERMITTED TO SPEAK BEFORE.

Special to The Daily News.

Annapolis, Md., July 27.—From the lips of a private of marines, a slender youth in khaki, without a gold button or single shoulder strap, came the most graphic story of the events leading up to the mysterious killing of Lieutenant James N. Sutton of Oregon, at the Annapolis Marine barracks, which the solemn naval court of inquiry has yet heard.

The private was Charles W. Kennedy, sent from the Norfolk navy yard in charge of a sergeant major, after an anonymous letter had told Mrs. Sutton that the man in the ranks had evidence of importance.

All of the officers concerned in the fight, with the exception of Lieutenant Harold H. Utley, have testified, but none mentioned the presence of the private.

Kennedy, under oath, made these startling points:

1. At Sutton's request he held his cap, cape and blouse, while Sutton fought Adams in the first encounter.

2. Adams was getting the worst of it when Private Kennedy called Lieutenant Utley to take Sutton's clothes, as he could not be late in relieving a sentry at the naval hospital.

3. Sutton called him back after he had given Utley the clothes.

4. He looked back at Sutton's call, but went on his way to his post, though three men were beating Sutton.

5. One reason for not obeying Sutton was that he could not afford to be mixed up in the affair.

6. He took a position after going on hospital guard which commanded a view both of the officers' training ground and the parade ground on the edge of which the fatal shots were fired.

7. He saw the flashes of four shots, and heard some one cry, "Are you shot?"

8. Before leaving the barracks he saw Lieutenant Becker, the missing witness, in civilian clothes, talking with Lieutenant Bevan, the officer of the guard in the latter's office.

9. On Sunday morning he saw Lieutenant Utley take from a growth of weeds the gun, which Sergeant De Hart had thrown away the night before, and carry it into the marine barracks. He swore that it was a Colt 38, of blue steel, a service gun.

All Brand-New Points.

Each of these points, brought out with the utmost frankness by this private, were brand-new in the case. Major Leonard, the smiling judge advocate of the court, was supposed to look after the interests of the service, made a valiant attempt to attack the credibility of the witness. He picked upon his service record, which shows five or six bad marks—having liquor in his possession, "sassing" a quartermaster and overstaying leave, were the "crimes" Kennedy confessed to with a confused smile. He said he did not consider his record bad.

There followed a thorough attempt to mix up the private as to time, distance and particular circumstances, but in vain.

One of Kennedy's strongest points came out by cross-examination by Attorney Arthur Burry, who represents Lieutenants Adams and Osterman, who were concerned with the fight. This was when he told of having seen Lieutenant Utley pick up the missing gun after the 6 o'clock drill on Sunday morning.

While not in contradiction, Private Kennedy made one strong point when he definitely fixed the time of firing the shots after the first fight in which he saw Sutton, Adams, Osterman and Utley.

Heard Striking of Bell.

"The bell of the Naval Academy was striking the hour of 1:30 when I heard the first shot," he declared. Surgeon Pickrell testified that Sutton lived twenty minutes after the fatal shot was fired, and the official death report shows that he died at 1:33 o'clock, when being carried to the naval hospital. This gives an exact check on the private's time.

"Why didn't you testify at the first inquiry?" Kennedy was asked by Major Leonard.

"Well, Mr. Utley came to me the next morning and said, 'Kennedy, don't you dare say anything about what you saw.' I didn't think it was my place to say anything after that." The board of inquiry denied Attorney Davis' request that the testimony of Mrs. Rose Sutton Parker, sister of the dead lieutenant, be held back until Lieutenant Utley and Sergeant Cook had testified. It is not unlikely that both Mrs. Sutton, the lieutenant's mother, and her daughter, Mrs. Parker, who is the wife of an army officer, will take the stand soon.

There was obtained last night the full text of the letter of Miss Tsu Teuruda, the Japanese maid, who was in love with Lieutenant Sutton. The Japanese girl was employed in the home of Colonel Doyen, the commandant of the marine barracks. It is even said that Mrs. Doyen penned the letter. It contains no intimation that young Sutton was murdered.

IN THE COURTS

THE LIMA SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY NOW SEEKS AN ADJUSTMENT.

A DIVORCE PETITION
FILED BY RHENA BAKER

ALLEGING THAT HER HUSBAND
HAS BEEN GUILTY OF EX-TREMELY CRUELTY.

The Lima Southern railway has filed suit against the Lima Belt Railway Co., a corporation, owned by the C. H. & D., in which the plaintiff states that it is engaged in constructing a steam road from the junction of the C & E to the Ohio Steel Foundry Co. Plaintiff has acquired the right of way over the defendant's tracks by proceedings in probate court and has paid damages for the same. They now pray the court for an equitable adjustment of the expenses for the crossing and for the court to define the manner of crossing.

Extreme Cruelty Alleged.

Yesterday Rhena Baker filed a divorce petition vs. Henry F., which was withheld from the News until the papers were served on the defendant. Ms. Baker states in her petition that Henry has been extremely cruel to her and her children, relating a specific offense which occurred on July 1st of this year, when the defendant threatened to kill her with a shotgun. Plaintiff says that the defendant is the owner of valuable real estate and live stock and wants an injunction from the court to prevent the defendant from parting with his property.

The couple were married in Amanda township, January 23, 1875, and have nine children two of which are minors. She asks the court for alimony.

Commissioners.

The county commissioners are holding a joint meeting with the commissioners of Hardin county today, on the Meyer ditch.

AT THE CITY HOSPITAL.

The demand for accommodation at the city hospital has been heavy of late. Twenty-one patients are now occupying beds, and only one was discharged Monday. All, however, are doing nicely and several will probably be discharged in the next few days.

SUIT CASE

Full Of Evidence To Be Used Against Harry
Thaw

IS CARRIED INTO COURT BY HIS FORMER COUNSEL, MR.
HARTBRIDGE.

FINE ITALIAN HAND
OF ATTORNEY JEROME

IS CLEARLY SHOWN IN THE
HEARING NOW IN PROGRESS
AT WHITE PLAINS.

Special to the Daily News.

New York, July 27.—Clifford W. Hartbridge, former Harry K. Thaw's personal counsel, was the central figure in Thaw's habeas corpus proceedings at White Plains today. But this time he appeared in a far different role than that of a lawyer.

He came as an expert lawyer appearing as witness against his former client and with a large suit case filled with papers. It was the plan of Mr. Jerome to have the lawyer produce on the witness stand evidence that is believed by the prosecutor will be damaging to Thaw.

The regular order of things was waived by stipulation and Hartbridge took the stand the first thing after the noon recess. He recently instituted a suit against Thaw's mother for a sum of money over $70,000. The Thaws produced receipts showing that he had already received $103,000.

No time was lost by Mr. Jerome, who immediately popped the question:

"Mr. Hartbridge, have you any reports of the alienists with you?"

"I have," replied the witness.

"State what reports," continued Jerome. Whereupon Mr. Morschauer objected, saying that anything that Hartbridge had received while Thaw's counsel was confidential.

Objection is Sustained.

Justice Mills finally allowed the papers to be marked for identification, but when Mr. Jerome asked the names of those making the reports the court sustained Mr. Morschauer's objection.

Quickly following this came the climax of the day.

"I am informed," said Mr. Jerome, "that this man was addicted to the use of drugs and certain instruments. I believe that such instruments were delivered to Thaw's attorney."

Mr. Jerome asked amid a breathless silence.

"Has there been delivered to you any tangible instruments?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Who gave it to you?" asked Mr. Jerome.

"Two women," answered the witness. Being asked to name the women he said "Bessie Merrill and a woman named Wallace."

Justice Mills then sent Hartbridge into his private room to wrap up the instrument and bring it in to be marked for identification, and still tagging the heavy suit case the lawyer-witness disappeared into the private room of the court's office.

Said to be a Whip.

For fully five minutes he was gone, then returned, suit case in one hand and a long narrow parcel, fully a yard in length, wrapped up in newspapers. This was marked for identification.

There were whispers all over the room as witnesses, spectators and newspaper men hazarded guesses as to the contents of the mysterious parcel. It was learned later that the affair is a heavy whip. Mr. Jerome said later that he would try and prove its use by Thaw in cross-examination.

Thaw seemed to enjoy this whole affair, for he laughed several times and turned first to the lawyer and at times to Mr. Jerome, who sat beside him. Jerome and Thaw had their heads together several times during the session and seemed to be on excellent terms.

At the close of the session Mr. Morschauer announced what his position would be in relation to his client.

"We will take the position that Mr. Thaw was insane at the time he killed Mr. White, but that he was suffering with a mental disturbance which was superinduced by attacks of pneumonia and ptomaine poisoning, causing a toxic condition of the blood."

Not Chronic Paranoia.

"This condition of the blood will produce a paranoiac state from which one can recover, but it is far from chronic paranoia, which we will easily prove is progressive and continually grows worse instead of better. Mr. Thaw is perfectly sane now, and we will show this, we expect, without any trouble."

More than an hour before court was opened defiantly gowned women, with handsome plumed hats, packed the corridors and the line extended out into the street. More than a hundred women refused to desert their places throughout the day.

Thaw was accompanied by his father, his mother, sister, half-brother Josiah, the latter's wife and counsel.

Little time was lost in starting. Mr. Morschauer objected to Mr. Jerome coming into the case, but was overruled.

Dr. H. Ernest Schmidt, of White Plains, was put on the stand as an alienist for Thaw. He told of many visits to Thaw, and said he thought he was sane now.

"Brain-Storm" Alienist.

Then came Dr. William J. Heyer, the jail physician, who had seen Thaw often, and thought him sane. He was not cross-examined.

Dr. Britton D. Evans, of "brain-storm" fame, was the next witness. He was still under direct examination when court adjourned until 9:45 tomorrow. He was the same witness as of old, but the situation of him and Jerome swarming craftily in cross-examination was not created. It will come, no doubt, tomorrow.

Dr. Evans said that Thaw had told him he wished to go upon the witness stand, but that he did not think it fair that Jerome should be allowed to bulldoze him, whereupon the doctor replied that he should by all means go upon the stand, and in regard to the Jerome heckling he would have to take his chances.

This made Thaw laugh, and he leaned over to Jerome, whispered something to him to which Jerome replied, and then both laughed. Thaw will go upon the stand late tomorrow or Wednesday.

JOHN VORHES

PROMINENT HARROD CITIZEN,
DIES SUDDENLY.

After an illness of two weeks, which, however, had not been considered serious at any time, John Vorhes, a prominent and well known Harrold citizen, passed away at 1:15 home in that place on Saturday evening. His death came very suddenly and was a great shock to his family and friends.

Mr. Vorhes was quite well known in this city, where a son, Joseph V. Vorhes, is connected with the Old National Bank, and where his daughter, Miss Lavinia, was one of the graduates from Newcomer's School of Expression at the Lima College.

Mr. Vorhes was a genial man, one who held the universal esteem and affection of a wide circle of friends. His death is deeply regretted both in this city and in Harrold, where he had resided for many years.

TARIFF CONFEREES BUSIED IN WINDING UP THE DRAWN OUT FIGHT.

Special to The Daily News.

Washington, July 27.—Hides will be put on the free list if boots and shoes and other manufactures of leather are reduced below the rates fixed by the house bill. Unless advocates of free hides are able to carry out this bargain, the whole program is to be called off. A decision to this effect was reached by the tariff conferees.

Senator Aldrich has informed Senators from northwestern states that he will not consent to the abolition of the duty on hides unless there is a material cut in the rates on boots and shoes and other leather goods. In no other way, he said, can he get the votes necessary for the adoption of the report in the senate if it carries free hides.

A $5,000,000 melon that has been ripening for nearly 75 years is at last being sliced by the government for distribution among the Cherokee Indians.

It has been a standing claim of the Indians against Uncle Sam since 1835. In that year the government owed the Cherokees, for land, purchased the sum of $1,100,000 which lay in the Treasury to their credit with interest at 5 per cent.

Then one fine day an error was made in the auditing department of the Treasury and it appeared, according to the books, that the Cherokees had nothing to their credit. Their head men took up the matter, hired lawyers and for 65 long years labored to establish their claim. They tried the executive officials and besieged Congress but without making an impression worth a cent, to say nothing of the millions they were after. They were told the books showed they had nothing coming and government records being infallible, there was no ground for argument. So it was, year after year, as the Indians made their pilgrimages to Washington.

About 10 years ago the aspect of things changed somewhat when Robert L. Owen, an attorney of Muskogee, I. T., was given charge of the claim. He was a member of the Cherokee nation through his mother's side while his father was Robert L. Owen, a Virginian and President of the Tennessee Railroad. Attorney Owen was highly educated, he had wit and judgment besides, and he proceeded to make things move. The first thing to do was to get permission from Congress to proceed against the government in the Court of Claims and prove that the missing dollars of the ancient Cherokee fund really lay in the vaults of the Treasury. He got it and afterwards repeated the achievement, two hearings in the Court of Claims being necessary to prove up the claims of the Indians. In the seven years' campaign he conducted Mr. Owen introduced Congress to pass three bills and two resolutions necessary in his work. Anybody feeling that it is not much of a job to get that much action out of the greatest legislative body in the world has never undertaken any little old task like moving the Rocky Mountains.

Owen's final contest was to move the case into the United States Supreme court and he succeeded in that in 1906 as he had in all that went before. The record he submitted to the court consisted of 2,700 printed pages. He argued the case against the skilled lawyers in the government service and he won a judgment that the original fund, swelled by the accumulated interest to $5,000,000, belonged to the living Cherokees.

The court awarded him a fee of $200,000, which approximates the record for stipends for legal services even in the Supreme Court.

The decision placed upon the government officials the stupendous task of ascertaining who was entitled to the money, of seeing to it that none having rights were overlooked and that impostors did not get a place at the counter. A person having one sixty-fourth part of Cherokee blood was a legal member of the Cherokee nation and the search through involved family ties threatened to be almost endless. The list of those entitled to a share in the fund has now been completed, however, and contains 35,000 names. It was made up from an army of 85,000 applicants.

There are more kinds of "bugs" at Fort Myer these balmy days during the Wright aeroplane trials than have ever before been assembled in one collection. The insects aren't of the common, garden variety, they are the genus crank, and the most buzzing, persistent, and foolish aggregation yet aggregated.

Wilbur and Orville do not belong to this classification. Far from it. They shut themselves up in the aeroplane tent behind a dozen husky soldier sentinels simply to get away from the bugs. Every day there are a couple of dozen of these cranks on hand, sitting as near the scene as the soldier boys will permit, and handing out free advice to anybody who will listen. Each of them knows how to correct the minor defects in the Wright aeroplane—all of them will tell you, confidentially, that their idea of flying is vastly superior to the clumsy, hit and miss efforts of the Dayton boys. Vastly different.

One of the bugs shows up at the press tent on the Fort Myer parade grounds daily, and illustrates by means of a small piece of twisted iron rod and a tin propeller shaper missel the principle of the helicopter, and thinks helicopter. His little portable illustration of the helicopter was a child's plaything in bygone days, but, as the bug will explain, flying has been in vogue among birds since the creation.

Then there is another—this one says he's from Kansas—who followed the Wrights from Dayton here to Washington. He has some radical improvements to suggest in their machine. "The curvature of the plane isn't right," he plaintively declares. "They ought to be this way—" and he pulls out a small volume of assorted curve drawings, or if you don't edge out of sight, he will offer to draw you a new diagram.

During one of the very best flights when the Wright machine was curvetting along in the air and everybody else was engrossed in watching its behavior, one bug had his eyes glued to the flight of a big buzzard, across the far end of the field. He said in explanation that the Wright machine was a mere bungling attempt at flying, and that the true solution of aerial navigation was to be found in the study of birds.

SECRETARY WILLIAM WHITE

ECHO OF BANK COLLAPSE
HEARD IN LOCAL COURT.

BANK'S CLAIMS ARE SAID TO BE
WEAK TO SECURE RETURN OF BONDS.

As an echo of the absconding of Assistant Cashier Noah R. Marker, of the First National Bank at Tipton, Indiana, comes the voluntary action of the Farmers' and Citizens' Live Stock company, with home offices in this city, placing itself in the hands of a receiver, the court naming M. L. Becker, who yesterday took charge of the company's affairs in the opera house block.

It is not known at this time whether the assistant cashier was in any way involved in the insurance company or in the bond matter. The receivership quickly followed the receiver proceedings brought by the First National Bank of Tipton, Indiana, to recover possession of $40,000 worth of Cayahoga county bonds, which securities practically guaranteed the integrity of the insurance company.

Yesterday Cable & Parmenter, representing the First National Bank, of Tipton, filed a "don't publish" suit in the local common pleas court, in which it was sought to regain possession of the bonds named above, which had been placed in escrow with the First National Bank of this city, on the demand of State Insurance Superintendent C. C. Lemert, made a few weeks ago, the bonds having been placed in custody here about a month ago. The First National of this city, had no other connection with the matter, more than that of being custodian of the bonds which formed a portion of the assets of the company, and all-sufficient to guarantee its outstanding policies.

Following the action in replevin, came the receivership; through the attorney of the company, Walter B. Ritchie, on his own claim and answer of William White, secretary of the insurance company, who joined in the prayer for the receiver.

While it is not known positively at this time, it is understood that the insurance company with home offices here is an Indiana institution incorporated under Ohio laws, and the bulk of its business is done in the Hoosier state, and was financed at Tipton.

A peculiar fact in connection with the local proceedings are the allegations of the Indiana bank, which claims a lien against the bonds, in their petition, stating that White, secretary of the insurance company, deposited the bonds on May 19, 1909, accompanied by a draft drawn for $37,142.59, to be delivered to said Wm. White on payment by him of said draft, and that the bank had paid said draft.

The petition then alleges that White wrongfully and fraudulently obtained possession of said bonds from plaintiff without its knowledge or consent.

Plaintiff seeks the possession of the bonds and damages in the sum of $1,000.

How $40,000 in bonds could be taken from a bank's vaults without the knowledge of its cashier or officials when an alleged claim for $37,600 was held by the bank against it, is now puzzling the parties who are interested in the present litigation.

The officers of the Farmers' and Citizens' Live Stock Insurance company, which has done a good business for the past year or more, are: President, Harvey J. Cannal; vice President, J. E. Baxter; secretary and general manager, Wm. White. Mr. White was out of the city today when a News representative attempted to locate him.

Marker, after sweeping together the money, set the time lock on the safe so that it could not be opened until 9 o'clock Monday morning, and left the city on a traction car for Indianapolis at 8 o'clock Saturday

...trilling his wife that he would spend Sunday with his father and in their Indianaapolis. Noah had more than been heard from him since.

Marker left a note on the desk of his brother William Marker, cashier of the bank, saying that he had gone to Indiana and that he had taken enough money to pay his expenses.

The fact that he had emptied the cash box of nearly $50,000 was not known until the time local law enforcement officers raided the bank Monday morning.

Whether or not Marker had previously taken money from the bank's funds and had covered up the defalcations by making false entries in the books cannot be known until the trial of a national bank examiner.

Posted Notice on Door.
 The directors of the bank Monday decided to suspend the bank's operations until the examiner should have taken charge of the books. They posted on the front of the bank building a placard reading:

"N. B. Marker, assistant cashier of this bank, has absconded with all its cash. The treasury department at Washington has been notified, and the bank will remain closed awaiting the department's instructions."

The bank has been involved in litigation for the possession of $40,000 of Cuyahoga county (Ohio) bonds. The bank's president, E. W. Shirk, was notified by his attorneys in Lima, Ohio, that they had obtained by receiver suit these securities, which have been held by the Farmers and Citizens' Live Stock Insurance company, of Lima, and had given bond for them for double their value.

This proceeding was begun by Mr. Shirk last week, when, on returning to this city after several weeks' absence, he found that the banks had become compelled to pay to the owners of the securities the amount of their value.

Settled for Bonds.
 The bonds had been turned over to the insurance company by Noah Marker for examination, he said, and he had not demanded that they be paid for before they left his hands.

When the owners insisted that either the bonds should be returned to them or that a draft for their value should be forwarded to them, Noah Marker obtained a loan of $40,000 from an Indianapolis bank, on his own bank's part, and he had settled for the bonds.

Mr. Shirk said last night that he had not been able to find a record of this loan on the Tipton bank's books. Marker told him of the loan last week.

Neither, he said, had he found a check for $5,000, representing a partial prepayment by the insurance company on the bonds made last April, when the bonds were sent to a local bank to be turned over to the prospective purchaser when he should pay the balance of $35,000.

Mr. Shirk added that he was informed that the insurance department of the state of Ohio had taken charge of the bonds as a part of the security deposited by the insurance company for the privilege of doing business in Ohio.

Will Pay Indebtedness.
 "I do not know," said Mr. Shirk, "the condition of the bank's funds, but I do know we shall pay every cent of indebtedness. We are perfectly able to do this."

William Marker, the cashier, said last night that he felt sure his brother would return in a few days and face prosecution.

"He has been worrying over letting those bonds out of his hands until he is mentally deranged," said Mr. Marker. "He hardly ate or slept for ten days before he left."

Noah Marker had been connected with the bank for 19 years. He was the Republican candidate for mayor of the city four years ago, and was defeated. He was an active church member. He is 35 years old and has a wife and two children.

No affidavit against Noah Marker will be filed until the arrival of the national bank examiner, who is expected today.

The resources of the First National bank amount to $1,100,000. Its capital is $100,000. Deposits amount to $345,771.

A BALD NEWSPAPER MAN.
 Getting a New Crop of Hair, and Has No More Dandruff.

Everybody in the northwest knows Col. Daniel Searles, the veteran journalist and publisher of Butte. Jan. 10, 1900, the colonel writes: "I used a couple of bottles of Newbro's Herpicide with marvelous results. The dandruff disappeared; a new crop of hair has taken root, and the bald spot is rapidly being covered." Herpicide is the only hair preparation that kills the dandruff germ, that digs up the scalp in scales as it burrows its way to the root of the hair, where it destroys the vitality of the hair, causing the hair to fall out. Sore Throat Wisdom
 If every mother could realize the danger that lurks behind every case of sore throat, she wouldn't rest until she has effected a cure every time a child has it.

Your family physician will verify the statement that it is a positive fact that every child with sore throat is in immediate danger of contracting Croup, Quinsy, Tonsillitis, and is not removed from that danger until the throat is cured. Think of it!

Liniments or outward application of medicines do not and cannot cure the ailment, though they may offer temporary relief. Neither can you cure sore throat with a cough syrup or a cold cure.

To cure, you must get at the seat of the disease, removing the cause. Nothing does that so quickly, safely and surely as TONSILINE. A single dose of TONSILINE taken upon the first appearance of sore throat may save long weeks of sickness, great expense, worry, even death. TONSILINE is the stitch in time.

Use a little sore throat wisdom and buy a bottle of TONSILINE today. You may need it tomorrow.

TONSILINE is the standard sore throat remedy—best known and most effective and most used. Look for the long necked fellow on the 25 or 50 cent sized bottle when you go to the drug store to get it. The Tonsiline Co., Canton, Ohio.

AFTER THE VISITING SHOPPER
 HAD MADE A FEW PUR-CHASES—POLICE NEWS.

Yesterday a pickpocket got in his work and victimized a country lady who came into the city to do some shopping. Mrs. Anna E. Bensman of Minster, Ohio, is the loser. She was stopping at the Hoffman House and visited the five and ten cent store to make some small purchases. She had a large pocketbook with a small purse inside which contained $57. When she came out of the store the large pocketbook was open and both the purse and the money were gone. The loss was reported to the police.

Arrested His Escape.
 Sunday evening the police force were outwitted by a fourteen year old boy, and the bluecoats have been trying to keep it under their hats until it leaked out last night. The culprit is James Engle, who stole a horse at Bluffton and was sent to the Children's Home by Judge Huston Sunday afternoon. The lad ran away from the Home and went directly to the police station. There he told the officer in charge that he had come to Lima for the day and had spent the money he had been given to return. He was taken to the Western Ohio depot and put on the car at 10 o'clock. Later the police were informed of the boy's past history and now they are looking for him.

Another Small Robbery.
 Yesterday afternoon the rooms of Mrs. Carey C. Williams at 114 west Market street, were ransacked by unknown thieves who secured $31, two pocketbooks, a gold spoon and a pair of white gloves. Mrs. Williams was visiting neighbors at the time the robbery occurred.

The Morning's Docket.
 Lillian Gullion was the only offender to face his Honor this morning. Lillian was arrested three days ago for disorderly conduct and she knew it would go hard with her this time. She pleaded not guilty to the charge of intoxication and her hearing was set for Monday morning.

J. J. Keating was arrested at two o'clock this morning on suspicion. He was seen by Officer Bliffstein tapping through the alleys back of the Vicary and Thompson homes. He gave his business as that of a traveling salesman. He has not yet been arraigned.

It Can Be Done, So Scores of Lima Citizens Say.

To cure an aching back. The pains of rheumatism. The tired-out feelings. You must reach the spot—get at the cause.

In most cases 'tis the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys.

L. M. Isham, 609 Harrison ave., Lima, Ohio, says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills, and my experience has been so satisfactory that I can strongly recommend them. I was annoyed by sharp stitches in my back, and to stoop was quite a task. After the day I began sitting in one position for awhile, it was all I could do to straighten up. Being told that Doan's Kidney Pills were very effective in cases of this kind, I procured a box and commenced their use. I received immediate relief and before long the pain and lameness had entirely disappeared."

TWO BIOGRAPH PICTURES

At the Royal Theatre, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

The first subject delineated is, A Friend of the Family, wherein a manly fellow steps in and dissuades a husband and father from eloping with another woman. Handsome men and women give the pictures an intensely interesting effect.

Another late output is "Tender Hearts" wherein a country lass is being courted by both a city and country lad and is undecided which to choose until she observes the city chap kiss a wounded bird out of the roadway while the country boy, after the day I began sitting in one position for awhile, it was all I could do to straighten up. Being told that Doan's Kidney Pills were very effective in cases of this kind, I procured a box and commenced their use. I received immediate relief and before long the pain and lameness had entirely disappeared."

Two additional photoplay reproductions makes the bill a lengthy one and good in every respect.

PRESIDENT'S GREAT INFLUENCE.

President Taft makes no appeals to the country, over the heads of Senators and Representatives. He does not let the nation hear the swish of the big stick. He is quiet, moderate, diplomatic. The administration is making no record for fervid oratory. It is using no threats which the people can hear. But the White House influence remains now, as it was under Theodore Roosevelt, a tremendous power in the government, outside of the exercise of the functions enumerated in the Constitution.

The provision in the organic law of the United States that the President "shall from time to time give to the Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient," certainly was not supposed to imply such pressure as President Taft has been exercising in the last fortnight, for lower duties on raw materials and for the corporation income tax.

Nothing, it seems, can now stop the gradual growth of the power and influence of the chief executive of the United States. The White House has been gaining at the expense of the Capitol for a long time, and the change is likely to go farther, notwithstanding all that is written and said about Aldrich and Cannon as the real heads of the national government. Senate leaders and speakers of the House of Representatives come and go but the President will almost always be a masterful man, with the immense advantage of being the direct choice of a majority of the American people, known to them and trusted by them as no one in either House of Congress is likely to be.

The secret of the change lies in the concentration of power over the vast business of the national government in the hands of the President, together with an equal or greater concentration of popular interest. Nine times out of ten the people feel that the President is their choice, their favorite, their representative, in a sense which is never true, in any such degree of the majority in the House and certainly never in respect to the Senate.

BRUTES AND THE FAIR SEX.

When crusted and cynical bachelors read the doings of the divorce courts and lend willing, if not eager ears to the stories of the unhappiness of married friends which has not yet got to the judicial operating table, they are prone to quote Punch's famous advice to People About to Get Married: "Don't!"

If, however, they break from their moorings and seek a wife, it is well for them to take counsel with experience.

Judge Romjue would be a good person for them to consult in such amatory affairs. In his court at Marion, Ga., appeared Thomas Farmer, charged with deserting his wife. Testimony showed she was a shrew. "There's a mother. Because of her nagging, he ran away."

What the judge said to him will furnish a good tip to all weakening bachelors.

A man should be the boss of his own household," the judge remarked. "I doubt very much whether a woman entertains very much respect for a husband who will submit to her constant nagging, and not resent it. She grows to look upon him as a sort of molly-coddle, and the woman never lived who could love a molly-coddle."

But the man intent on marriage would do best by the following: the plan of Christian Johnson. He knows. Seventeen wives has he wedded and the list would be longer if California prison doors hadn't closed untimely on him for bigamy. Human nature doesn't change, though, and probably he will add a dozen or so more scalps when his seven years are over.

The Johnson recipe is simple and infallible. "The women I met fell in love with me after I talked with them only a few times. I have found it does not pay to be soft and sweet with a woman. Treat her a little harsh, and be a little distant and she will come to you."

This is not pleasant for women to read or for kind-hearted, loving men to ponder over. To them it seems that affection, devotion of deed and word and thought, consideration and humanness should be the things that count. But Johnson is a man of practical experience. He proves his case. Against the puny single marriages of good, kind men he holds up seventeen marriage licenses, he shows tons of miscellaneous love-letters. "That's my method," he says, "and it wins." What is the other kind of a husband and the wobbling, sentimental bachelor going to do against such arguments?

TURNING THE CORNER IN WHEAT

At the middle of July the stock of wheat in sight in this country and Europe, and afloat for export, was about 67,000,000 bushels. That quantity was exclusive, of course, of wheat in the hands of farmers, and it did not include any of the new crop in the United States. The visible supply at the corresponding date in 1908 was about 71,000,000 bushels, or only 4,000,000 bushels larger.

It does not require an expert in the grain trade to perceive in these facts proof that the world did not stand in any danger of real lack of breadstuffs, last spring, as it seemed to face when the Patten corner in the Chicago wheat market was being worked up to its climax. At that time the News assured its readers that there was nothing ahead like a wheat famine, or any cause for extremely high prices for that grain and the present statistical position of the wheat market is proof of the accuracy of that estimate of the outlook for the most important bread grain of Western Europe and North America.

Now the outlook is for good prices for wheat, from the point of view of the grower, but it does not warrant the supposition that Patten corner figures, or anything like them, can be maintained or again established. The world has not yet come so near the limit of its resources in the elemental task of feeding its inhabitants.

ALASKANS HAVE RESOLVED TO ASK CONGRESS TO DIVIDE THEIR COUNTRY INTO THREE TERRITORIES, THE SEATS OF GOVERNMENT TO BE AT FAIRBANKS, JUNEAU AND NOME. THEY SAY THE INTEREST OF THE DISTRICTS ARE SO DIVERGENT THAT ONE GOVERNMENT CAN NOT GIVE SATISFACTION TO ALL. INCIDENTALLY, THE SCHEME PROPOSED WOULD INVOLVE THE APPOINTMENT OF THREE BUNCHES OF TERRITORIAL OFFICERS, BUT THE RESOLUTIONS IN QUESTION SAY NOTHING ABOUT THAT.

Part of the testimony in the Sutton case is that the lieutenant was shot back of the ear; other evidence is that he was shot in the top of the head. Incidental developments warrant the belief that he killed himself intentionally, also that his death was accidental, not to mention the suspicion that some one else killed him. The only certainty seems to be that he is dead.

Over 25,000 licenses have already been issued in New York to prospective deer hunters although the season does not open until September. The state expects to obtain more than $200,000 from hunters' fees, this year, which would double the record of 1908. Is this the effect of the Roosevelt example?

An Easthampton, Mass., farmer caught a thirteen-pound fish, the other day, with a common rake, while it was sunning itself at the surface of a pond. The bumptious and expansive West is invited to beat his record, before Mr. Roosevelt brings home his big stick for "nature fakers."

There was a time when the accounts of hard fighting by Spanish troops, to hold a fortified position against the Moors, might have called forth sneering comment in the United States, but that was before Vera del Rey's heroic stand at Caney and Cervera's gallant sortie to the certain destruction of his weak and ill-appointed squadron.

The harvest fields of the West are calling loudly for help, while there are many able bodied immigrants in New York and other seaboard cities who are too poor to pay their fare to Kansas. Some millionaires might do worse than endow a workers' transportation bureau created solely to bring jobs and willing hands together.

Immigration dropped, last month, 23,369, or about 20 per cent. below the May record, but it still exceeded the figures of June 1908, by 53,623 or about 170 per cent, which shows how well the coming of better times in America is understood in Europe.

Turkey has just celebrated the first anniversary of the granting of a constitution, and the jubilation seems to have been far more decorous and sane than the American Fourth of July—outside of Lima and one or two other cities.

The violence of Henry Watterson's remark that "The parallel between the protective system and the institution of African slavery continues to grow apace" is not surprising, but what shall be said of its accuracy, as a matter of vital diagnosis? Does Mr. Watterson really think that protection is dead?

A Frenchman has been the first to fly across the English Channel, and now it remains for a German to fly all the way across the sea to England, from the coast of his own country. Britons are great travelers but in the air they lag behind their neighbors.

If a man is stung by a bee can he collect damages from the bee owner? This is a late Connecticut controversy and the opinion prevails among jurists that he can, provided he can prove that a bee is live stock. A rich New Yorker, who has returned from Europe after a long absence, says that one reason why Americans like to live abroad is that they can escape publicity there. This has been suspected, but what is it they are ashamed of?

CHAPTER XVI.

A WHISPER OF VENGEANCE.

THE moment Lady Creech had gone Daniel smiled broadly for the first time since he had set eyes upon Ivanoff. He could see his way clear now to the thorough accomplishment of his mission, and he mentally thanked heaven for putting into his hands such a weapon as the Russian fugitive "Glenwood, eh? And he protected the historic name of St. Aubyn, that noble earl; protected it on the surface while he dragged it in the mire of another man's disgrace and humiliation in private. He was a sweet lot, that noble earl! He carried himself high, and his keen eye lost no whit of its dignity and importance from that conscience that must be uneasy within his breast."

And the woman, too, "Helene," Ivanoff had called her. So they had stuck together all those ten years, with Lady Creech as a most complaisant and discreet chaperone—but that couldn't be, for, whatever else Lady Creech might be, worldly wise and haughty, she was at least an English gentlewoman at heart, and she would have starved rather than connive at a scandal of that sort.

No, Daniel reflected, he would have to leave Lady Creech out of the mess, even though she was a bitter old dame. But Hawcastle should feel the touch of the iron. It should burn him deeply, and the fair countess, who was angling for that addle-headed Horace and his share of the estate? That woman, who had deliberately sent a good man to what was worse than death, should he have any pity for her? Not for a single instant.

He leaped up and hastily crossed the room to the writing desk, scribbled a note and, before he put it in the envelope, rang the bell.

As he seized the note Mariano tapped discreetly at the door, and Pike called:

"Come in!"

"Look here, Mariano, I want you to take this note to Miss Simpson," he said quickly.

"To Miss Granger-Seemphone?" asked the man deferentially.

"Yes. Do you know where she is?"

"She walk upon the terrace alone, said," replied Mariano.

"Then give it to her yourself—to no one else—and do it now!" he went on emphatically, pushing the servant out of the door in his haste. When he had closed it he went to the door of the suit, threw it open and called:

"Ivanoff!"

Almost immediately the Russian came into the room, and Pike noted the suffering upon his face, the look of timid apprehension with which he glanced furtively about. For him there was a carabinieri in every corner.

"Have they come?" he whispered tensely. Daniel went over to him and laid a hand upon the bent shoulder, looking him triumphantly in the eyes.

"Not yet," he answered, and paused. "Ivanoff, you prayed to see your wife and your friend Glenwood before you went back to Siberia."

The Russian tore himself away with a gasping cry, but Daniel caught his wrist.

"If that prayer is answered through me," he went on, "will you promise to remember that it's my fight?"

Ivanoff covered his face with his hands, and his breath came chokingly. "It is impossible! You wish to play with me!" he gasped.

"Do I look playful?" demanded Daniel. And as he spoke a bugle sounded sharply outside the window off to the right. At the sound Ivanoff shrank into himself, and his fingers trembled in the other's grasp.

"The carabinieri—for me!" he cried. Both men turned quickly to the window, and Pike thrust Ivanoff behind him as he drew aside the heavy curtain.

"Don't show yourself!" he commanded. But there was a smothered exclamation from the fugitive, and he pointed over Pike's shoulder.

"Look! Near the lamp yonder—there by the gates—the carabinieri!"

His arm trembled as it rested for an instant on the American's shoulder, and Pike returned quietly:

"Pouff! They've been there since we hid you beneath the machine." He stopped and shaded his eyes with his hand from the glare of the lamps inside the room, then started. "Why—who on earth—who's that they've got with 'em? Why, good Lord, it's Joe!"

Ivanoff strained over his shoulder to look and then replied bitterly:

"It is (Herr von Grollenhergen! Did I not tell you he was a Russian? He has betrayed me himself! He was not satisfied that others should. Ah, I knew I was in the wolf's throat here!"

Pike swore emphatically and exhaustively.

"Don't you believe it!" he snarled.

"They've arrested poor old Joe! Got him as he went out!"

"No!" cried Ivanoff. "They speak respectfully to him! They bow to him!"

"They'll be bowing to us in a minute. That's probably the way these fellows run you in!" snarled Daniel.

As he spoke there was a sharp knock on the outer door, and he seized Ivanoff by the arm.

"Back into the room with you! Wait until I call, and remember it's my fight!"

He was about to add more when the door opened and Mariano appeared. Instantly the American changed his tone to one of severe command.

"And don't you forget what I've been telling you. You got the said out of that gear box first thing tomorrow morning, or I'll see that you draw your last pay Saturday night!"

Ivanoff caught the idea and bowed silently, and then turned and entered the door to the inner chamber. Mariano came forward and bowed.

"Mees Granger-Seemphone," said he and went out, standing to one side to make room for Ethel as she entered with a look of complete astonishment on her face. Pike approached her.

"I'm much obliged to you for taking my note the right way," he said. "I've got some pretty good reasons for not leaving this room."

She inclined her head listlessly and nodded with the note she held.

"Your note seemed so extraordinarily urgent," she began, but he interrupted.

"It had to be," he said. "Some folks who want to see me are coming here, and I want you to see them—here. They'd stopped you from coming if they could."

She flashed a look of disbelief at him.

"There was no effort to prevent me," she said coldly.

"I didn't give 'em time," he smiled. "May I ask to whom you refer?" she inquired.

"Ivanoff caught the idea and bowed silently, and then turned and entered the door to the inner chamber. Mariano came forward and bowed."

She dropped her head.

"You're bullying me! I don't see why you talk so brutally to me!"

"Do you think I'd do it for anything but you?" he asked.

"You are odious, insufferable!" she cried, with a flash of temper.

"Don't you think I know you despise me?" he asked bitterly. And she flared again.

"I do not despise you. If I had stayed at home and grown up there I should probably have been a provincial young woman, playing 'Sweet Genevieve' on the organ for you to-night," she said. "My life has not been that, however, and you have humiliated me from the moment of your arrival here. You have made me ashamed both of you and myself. And now you have some preposterous plan that will shame me again—both of us—once more before these gentlemen."

There was a bustling without and some loud talking, and Pike smiled wily.

"I think these gentlemen are here," he said. As he spoke the door was thrown open, and Lady Creech hurriedly entered, followed by the countess, Horace, Almeric and the earl. The latter bowed sardonically to Pike, and Lady Creech hurried to Ethel with a cry of astonishment.

"My dear child! What are you doing here in this dreadful place with this dreadful person?" she demanded shrilly.

"My dear! Les convenances!" cried madame.

"Ethel! I am surprised! Come away at once!" demanded Horace.

"Oh I say, you know, Miss Ethel, really!" echoed Almeric. "You can't stay here, you know!"

Pike stopped them with a gesture and said:

"I'm her guardian, and she's here by my authority, and what's more, she'll stay by my authority."

Horace turned to the earl.

"Lord Hawcastle, will you insist upon Ethel's leaving? It's quite on ness, and the American laughed.

"I won't!" he snapped. "Speak out! Why?" But the earl would not answer directly, so Pike turned to Ethel.

"This afternoon I tried to help a poor devil, a broken down Russian running away from Siberia, where he'd been for nine years."

Ethel half rose in her chair and faced him eagerly.

"A poor, weak thing," he went on, "hounded like you've seen a rat in the gutter by dogs and bootblacks. Some of your friends here saw as bring him into this apartment. They know we've got him here now. If I don't agree to hand over you and $750,000 of the money John Simpson made it means that the man I tried to help goes back to Siberia and I go to an Italian jail for two years or as much more as they can make it."

"Nonsense," cried Hawcastle. But Ethel waved him aside and turned, with a withering look on Pike.

"I knew you had some further humiliation in store for me. Do you think I would believe that an English nobleman would stoop?"

Pike interrupted her ruthlessly and bitterly.

"Stop!" he cried. "Why, ten years ago in St. Petersburg there was a poor devil of a revolutionist who in his crazy patriotism took government money for the cause he believed in. He made the mistake of keeping that money in the house, when this man"—he pointed to Hawcastle—"knew it was there. He also made the mistake of having a wife this man coveted and stole, as he coveted and stole the money. Oh, he made a good job of it! Don't think that tonight is the first time he has given information to the police. He did it then, and the husband went to Siberia!"

Hawcastle was the picture of amazement and horror as he staggered up.

"A dastardly slander!" he cried.

"And he'll do it again tonight!" Pike went on. "I go to an Italian jail"—he whirled and pointed an accusing finger at Mme. de Champligny—"and that same poor devil of a husband goes back to Siberia!"

"It's—it's a ghastly lie!" croaked Hawcastle, his face livid.

"You came for your answer," went on Pike stridently, "and, by the living

IVANOFF SAW NONE BUT HER.

"HE HAS BETRAYED ME HIMSELF!"

God, I've got it for you!" He stepped to the door of the inner chamber and threw it open.

"Ivanoff!" he called, and the Russian came into the room. At the sight of him Hawcastle fell back against the mantel, and the countess collapsed in a heap on the floor. Ivanoff saw none but her and, striding to her, lifted both clinched hands above her head.

"Tran—oh, mother of God!—Ivan! Don't kill me!" she gasped.

For a moment he stood over her, then collapsed into a chair, where he wilted, sobbing violently.

Bargain Flashes From Economy's Searchlight.

Yesterday was our busy day, but we knew it would be, and were prepared for it. In fact, any lady living within reasonable distance, who read our Sunday announcement, could hardly resist the temptations that were scheduled. Among the most interesting items were the handsome Voile Skirts that we re-priced from $12.50 to $6.98, and the $15 ones at $7.48. Then, too, the linen colored and fancy striped Wash Skirts at 98c were an important factor. While the exquisite White Waists, marked from $1.00, $1.50 and $3.00 down to 58c, 98c and $2.18, also played a prominent part in the day's program. Today our decorator is arranging a display in our north show window that will certainly be interesting to Lima ladies. Just take a look at it while down the street. We don't mean that this attraction tends towards artistic skill, but the unusual pricing on just such things as every lady of good taste enjoys looking at. Our ad. man said he was going to increase business from 20 to 25 per cent this week, and if price concessions will help, I guess he is safe in his promise. Our sales last week were far ahead of our expectations. In fact, it is evident that the public realizes that our sale will soon end, and when once closed, they will be compelled to pay more for every thing they buy and for that reason, are laying in for future. Come in, walk around at your leisure, and see the hundreds of staple, up-to-the-times lines we have on display in every section of the store. Don't make any difference whether you buy or not, you always receive the same cordial treatment.

The habit of application becomes easy in time, like every other habit. Thus persons with comparatively moderate power, will accomplish much, if they apply themselves wholly and indefatigably to one thing at a time. It is apparent that the craze for manes and the deeper violet tones, which were unable to withstand the heat of June, and suddenly almost disappeared, being replaced by the beautiful grey-greens and shades of apricot pink, are destined, after all, to be successfully carried through the season. White tussore silks belonging to the making of smart coat and skirt suits, which this season have run into a uniform fashion quite as decidedly as if an association had been busy swearing in members of the feminine world. The model lines are growing closer together each year, less indifference being shown between what the ready-made patroness wear and the clothes of the swifter clientele coming from the best makers.

DINNER STORIES.

A young man late one cold wintry night found the door of his college locked against him. The young man outside argued with the doorman inside, cajoled, and entreated, but to no avail. Eventually he slipped half a sovereign under the door and was admitted. It was a financial deal wisely thought out on strict business lines. Once inside, he informed the janitor (falsely) that unfortunately after taking the half-sovereign out of his purse, he had dropped the purse itself on the doorstep. The attendant went out to secure it, but once on the chilly, wet doorstep, the door was slammed. Then the deal was repeated, for the shivering mercenary was not allowed into his warm abode until he had slipped the half sovereign back again.

The Hon. Theodore Hallam, one of Kentucky's most able lawyers, was often provoked to exasperation by the play of his friends made on his name. Hallam had borne allusions without end to the "middle axes," "constitutional laws" and the rest of it, when one day in Washington he was introduced to Governor Hogg, of Texas.

"Hallam? Hallam?" the Governor queried. "Are you the original?"

"No, Governor Hogg," replied Hallam. "Are you?"

Life is real if not altogether earnest among people of a type recently mentioned in the Washington Star. "I s'pose John is still taking life easy?" said the woman in the spring wagon on the road to Alexandria. "Yes," answered the woman who was carrying an armful of wood. "John has only two regrets in life. One is that he has to wake up to eat, and the other that he has to quit eating to sleep."

SULLY IS DEAD "SOT" AGAINST CIGARETTES.

It is one of the peculiar features of the athletic world that the old-time athletes in nearly every class of sport are dead set against cigarettes, and yet many of them have more than a speaking acquaintance with tobacco, writes Bob Edgren in the New York World. John L. Sullivan could never tolerate a cigarette smoker, and he spoke from the heart when he said in Cincinnati the other day: "Jeffries or no other man can fight unless his stomach is in good condition. They tell me the big fellow smokes cigarettes every day of his life. Well, you don't need to tell me any more about him. That's enough. If he has been smoking cigarettes by the handful since retiring from the ring, then he will never go back again. Ask any athlete who has trained on those pesky things, and he will tell you that they ruin a man's wind completely. Jeff could not possibly stand a course of training, and is done with the fighting game forever."

In connection with Sullivan's expression of disapproval of cigarettes I remember the remarks of a reporter—he was of the same old school as John L., whose friend he had been for nearly thirty years—who was sent up to interview Charles Daniels, the world's champion swimmer, a few weeks before the "human fish" began his preparation for the Olympic contests last year. In the course of conversation as to his plans and training, Daniels said: "Yes, I began my training today. I quit smoking cigarettes." "Thinking Daniels was 'stringing,' the reporter interrupted with: "Why, you don't smoke cigarettes, do you?" "Yes," replied Daniels, "I smoke several packages a day." And it was not until Daniels had furnished proof of the fact, would the reporter believe that a swimmer with world's records would smoke cigarettes, because if any athlete needs good lungs, it's a swimmer.

OLIVE OIL TALK.

The medicinal and beautifying qualities of pure Olive Oil are numerous and are becoming better known every day. There is nothing like it for overcoming a generally run-down and weakened condition of the system, while a teaspoonful of it after each meal will build flesh, gradually overcome indigestion and is said to be a certain preventive of appendicitis, and liver troubles. It is very beneficial when rubbed over the whole body after bathing, and is excellent for massaging a dry scalp. We recommend the Extra Fine Lucca Olive Oil as superior to all others. It has that rich, delicate, nutty flavor which it is impossible to secure in oils made in any other locality than Lucca, Italy. When in need of Olive Oil phone us and we will deliver it to you.

EDWARDS

The Retiring County Clerk Is In the Lime-light.

IS STRONGLY SPOKEN OF AS A CANDIDATE FOR POSTMASTER OF LIMA.

IS NOW IN COLUMBUS SEEKING ENDORSEMENTS

AND IS SAID TO HAVE BEEN ENDORSED BY CHAIRMAN HITCHCOCK.

Will Thomas J. Edwards, present county clerk, who retires from office next Monday, succeeded by C. A. Graham, step almost immediately into the political limelight again by being made the appointee to succeed Postmaster William A. Campbell?

This is the question which has startled Republicans on the streets of Lima. And the rumor is said to be backed by an alarming endorsement; an endorsement for Mr. Edwards of no less a person than Frank H. Hitchcock, chairman of the Republican National campaign committee.

When the News learned of what was doing locally many of the leaders of the party were seen and interviewed on the proposed change in the government of the local post office. One and all confirmed as far as they knew the fact that Mr. Edwards had been endorsed for postmaster by no less a person than Mr. Hitchcock, and that Mr. Edwards was today in Columbus seeking an "O. K." from the state committee, but many of the leaders went further and stated that the organization here had assurances from the State Committee that no one would be appointed here unless he carried the endorsement of the local committee, and this, they claim, Mr. Edwards can not get.

"Acting on this information which has just been generally received, a special call will be issued or has been issued for a meeting of the Central Committee, at which time all local candidates will be given an opportunity to show their strength. At this meeting, each aspirant will be invited to present his claims and a vote taken. The low man will be weeded out first, and the ballot continue until there is but one unanimous choice. Mr. Campbell and Mr. Edwards will have an even chance at this game."

It is understood that Captain A. M. Gale, A. Metheny, Mr. Campbell, Mr. Edwards and one or two others will present their claims to the committee, but party leaders say that neither Mr. Edwards nor Mr. Campbell can receive the majority and that the fight is between Captain Gale and Mr. Metheny for high honors.

Virginia Cabbage.

Select a small, fine pointed head of cabbage, cutting off the top for a lid. Cut out the center, leaving a wall an inch thick. Chop one cupful of cabbage very fine, then add one cupful each of ground ham and veal, one ground onion and finely chopped green pepper, six rolled crackers, two beaten eggs, one cupful of milk, two tablespoons of melted butter, one-half teaspoonful each of celery salt and salt, one tablespoonful of white pepper and two dashes of cayenne. Mix thoroughly, fill cabbage, tie on the lid, put in a cheesecloth bag and boil in salted water for one hour. Slice crosswise and serve with cream sauce. Delicious. Serve the potato croquettes on the same platter.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Fatherly Advice.

"Dad," said the country youth who had just graduated from the district school, "I have long cherished a desire to go on the stage and have at last decided, with your permission, to—"

"My boy," interrupted the old granger, "all the world's a stage. You hitch the mules to the big red plow and transfer the outfit to the ten acre lot behind the barn, where you can enact the star role in that beautiful drama entitled 'Down on the Farm.'"—Chicago News.

Courtship in the North.

The old Eskimo lit a cup of walrus oil and peered over the senkian curtain.

"Amors," he called, sharply, "is that young man down there yet?"

"Yes, pa," answered the Eskimo belle.

"Well, I want you to cut him out, understand?"

"Er—you'll have to do it yourself, pa. He has been here so long he is frozen to the snow settler."—Success Magazine.

Qualified.

The great magazine editor sneered.

"What right have you," he asked, "to think you'll ever make a poet?"

"Well, sir," the youth said timidly, "I've been fasting man in a show for the last two seasons."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

No man is wise at all times.—Pittsburgh Courier.

Returns Home From Ecuador

W. L. Russell Completes His Work In South America.

IS WILLING TO RETURN TO CANADA IF CANADIAN GOVERNMENT WANTS HIM.

WAS OVER IN EUROPE AT TIME OF INQUIRY AND REMAINED HERE TWO MONTHS AWAITING ACTION OF THE GOVERNMENT.

William L. Russell, the well-known former oil operator, banker and mining promoter, who has been in Ecuador, South America, for a year and a half, completing a project which he secured in 1907 as a concession from the government of Ecuador, is again at his home in this city, and expects to remain in this, his chosen home city, for some considerable time at least. With face and hands that have been tanned by Old Sol's heated rays in the tropics, Mr. Russell presents a perfect picture of health and he and Mrs. Russell are welcoming their friends at their beautiful home on West Market street to their usual cordial and hospitable manner. Both love Lima and they are pleased to be again at home.

During his absence of a year and a half from Lima, Mr. Russell has been the same active, busy man that he always was when his extensive oil field, banking and mining interests kept him at home here a few years ago. When the financial panic of 1907 brought about his disastrous depression upon all speculative interests within the boundaries of North America, he remained idle awaiting the outcome for only a short time, and when he realized that it would require many months and possibly two or three years for conditions to regain a normal status, he began to cast about for foreign concessions and not without success.

Made Good in Ecuador. Mr. Russell had already considerable experience in the manipulation of foreign concessions. He had successfully promoted several syndicate enterprises in the countries between the tropics of Cancer and Capricorn and knowing the needs of several of these countries in their efforts to keep the same pace with the more modern countries of the north, he soon found that there was need of his services again among the little Latin-American republics south of the Panama Isthmus. He had already installed an extensive telephone system in Venezuela for the government of that country, and in a short time he secured a similar concession from the government of Ecuador. He went to that country a year and a half ago, and during his stay there he completed the construction of several hundred miles of telephone system for the government.

It is doubtless generally remembered that some time before his departure from the States for Ecuador, Mr. Russell became involved in a tangle with the government of the Canadian state of Ontario, over the promotion of a number of silver mining projects in the Cobalt district and in the undeveloped country north of that district. He was interested in a company which was registered in Ontario as Law and Company, and during a period of several months, while he was in Europe financing some of the enterprises, officers of the company in Ontario, operating like hundreds of such organizations are daily operating in this country, and operating at that "crazy" period in Canada, became entangled with the government of Ontario. An election was approaching and the mining promotions were soon entangled with the chances of the conservatives for political success. The result was an inquiry, which terminated in the filing of certain charges against the promoters and officers of several mining companies. Mr. Russell being included in the list of defendants, notwithstanding the fact that he, at that time, was in Europe and had been for some time, and was in no way responsible for any infractions of state discipline that was intended to restrain operations in the "mining land" state of Ontario.

Remained Here Two Months. Mr. Russell remained here two months after his return from Europe.

awaiting the outcome of the political strife in Canada, but as no summons came for him, and as the financial panic had temporarily suspended the development of his interests in the Ontario mines, he took up the Ecuadorian concession and prosecuted it to a successful end. He had then and has now nothing to fear from the Canadian government, and could have been summoned at any time from Ecuador, had his presence in Ontario been needed. His chief counsel, both in this city and in Ontario, state positively that there is absolutely nothing in the charges, which were made during his absence that could possibly be substantiated, and he and his counsel stand ready at any time to defend his interests and his operations within the Canadian borders.

PROBATE COURT SENDS THE CASE OF A. J. WHITE TO THE GRAND JURY.

A. J. White, colored, charged with shooting at Maggie Williams, with intent to kill, was given a hearing before Probate Judge Hutchinson this morning, and at the conclusion of the arguments was bound over to the grand jury and his bond fixed at $400. White was arrested by Dan Kelly and John Conway about two weeks ago, and arraigned before Mayor Becker.

Maggie Williams refused to sign the affidavit and Kelly swore out a shooting with intent to kill affidavit. At the hearing in mayor's court, White was bound over to the highest court that gave his case a hearing to-day. The facts will now be turned over to the grand jury and if they do not warrant acquittal White will have to be tried before a jury of twelve.

Why She Was Right. Haydn had a peculiar way of determining the time in which a piece of music should be sung. On one occasion a female singer in high esteem at court had been appointed to sing one of Haydn's compositions. At the rehearsal she and the conductor differed as to the time of the music. The matter was to be settled by referring it to Haydn himself. When called on to decide he asked the conductor if the singer was handsome.

DEATH

Claims Former Well Known Lima Practising Attorney.

EDWARD A. BALLARD, AN ASSOCIATE OF ALLEN COUNTY BAR NO MORE.

FRIEND AND PUPIL OF MARTYRED PRESIDENT.

BORN IN ALLEN COUNTY, HE LEFT HERE MANY YEARS AGO FOR WEST.

Edward A. Ballard, one-time brilliant member of the Allen county bar, and known under the firm name of Ballard & Richie (late Judge J. E. Richie), later Ballard, Richie & Richie, the firm including the late jurist and Walter B. Richie; and still later Ballard & Mead (Mr. F. E. Mead), is dead in his Colorado home, having passed away Monday of this week.

Mr. Ballard was a brilliant barrister who attained high distinction before the local, district and state bar. In the west he was honored by being sent to the senate of his adopted state. He leaves one daughter, Edna, a Lima girl. Regarding the demise, the Lorimer (Colorado) Standard says:

"Edwin A. Ballard, 72, one of the pioneer members of the Lorimer County Bar Association, for forty years a practicing lawyer in this state and Ohio, erstwhile friend and pupil of James A. Garfield, died here today after a lingering illness from a complication of diseases."

"Ballard was born in Allen county, Ohio, August 20, 1837. Although denied a college education, he was a man of wide learning, with especial knowledge of the law. His briefs are used as models of diction and form in the state university law school. He was at one time a student in an academy of which James A. Garfield was principal. Garfield was captain of a cricket team on which young Ballard played. A personal friendship formed between the two men, continued until Garfield's death in 1881."

"Ballard served through the Civil war as private and first lieutenant, taking part in many important engagements with the Forty-second and Seventy-fourth Ohio regiments. He left the bar for a brief period, during which he was admitted to the bar in his native county. At the close of the war he began the practice of law, being elected soon after as prosecuting attorney of Allen county."

"He came west in 1875, settling first in Utah, where he remained two years. He came to Fort Collins in 1880 and practiced his profession here until 1892, when he went to Denver, remaining about twelve years. Just prior to 1892 he served one term in the state senate from Lorimer county, elected on the Democratic ticket when the county was largely Republican."

"About five years ago he returned to Fort Collins, and since that time has been the senior member of the law firm of Ballard & Sarchel."

"In his forty years of practice he made a good fortune. He would share his last dollar with a friend in need. Although he had been ill for more than a year, he rallied three or four times from sinking spells, and only three days ago, in order to convince a friend of his mental vigor, he quoted Shakespeare to him for half an hour. He had a remarkable memory and was known as a walking encyclopedia of the law."

"George H. Thomas Post, G. A. R., of which he was a charter member and past commander, held services at the grave."

SECRET

SOCIETIES LAMBASTED BY VISITING CLERGYMEN.

MASONS, ODD FELLOWS, ELKS, AND KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS ALL DENOUNCED.

After being refused admittance to the Y. M. C. A. building, where they had proposed to hold their mid-summer conference for the "discussion of secret societies," the small coterie of visiting clergymen who are here to attend the state session of the National Christian Association, repaired to the Assembly Room in the Court House last evening and held the opening meeting of their session, with about 100 persons, mostly Methodists, in attendance.

After the opening ceremonies from which the singing by Professor Mikesell's quartet had to be eliminated because Mr. Mikesell was the only one of the quartet present, an address of welcome was delivered by Elder G. A. Snider and a response by Rev. W. J. Sanderson, of Cedarville, Ohio, who acted as chairman of the meeting, a collection was taken up to defray the expenses of the speakers whose services had been enlisted for the session.

The address of the evening was delivered by Rev. W. B. Stoddard, of Washington, D. C., who has the distinction of being Eastern Secretary of the organization. He lambasted secret orders in general, not the men who comprise the membership of the grip and password organizations, for they are regarded only as unenlightened citizens, but the system of fellowship which "teaches men to be sneaky," and to hide their lights under a bushel and a half or two bushels. The Masons, Clan-na-gael, Knights of Pythias, Odd Fellows, Black Hands, Elks, Maschabees and Moose all came in for special mention and their orders were denounced. The speaker said there were two kinds of lodges, the gilt edged and the guilty edged, but he did not define which was the other, but simply generalized them by saying that at least some of them were "black with crime."

The conference will terminate to-night with an address by Rev. Samuel H. Swartz, President of the National Association, and pastor of the M. E. church at Seneca, Ill.

WASTE PAPER BOXES STILL ON CALENDAR.

APPLICATION FOR EXTENSION OF FRANCHISE REFERRED TO COMMITTEE.

Council met at the customary hour last evening, with Member Dilline absent. The proposal of James I. Hefner for an extension of the franchise granted to Fred Eastman, for paper boxes to be placed about the streets and alleys, was referred to the franchise committee.

Council gratified the desire of Mayor Becker in suspending the rules to pass a new disturbance ordinance. Drunks and disturbers of the peace will now be arraigned on city affidavits, instead of the state documents, which have been used since the validity of the old city ordinance was questioned by Judge O'Donnell, of Toledo.

An ordinance regulating the construction of telephone, telegraph, and lighting wires, in conduits, was read the second time and referred to the franchise committee.

Collins moved that the sewer committee be instructed to investigate the condition of the sewer on McDonnell street, near the north shore drive. Motion carried.

Mr. Kirk moved that the city solicitor be instructed to draft a resolution authorizing the board of public service to open and repair the sewer on Shawnee street, between High and North. Motion carried.

A complaint was made by Mr. Thomas that Scott street, south of Vine, was being filled with dirt previous to sewer drainage. The matter was referred to the board of public service.

A verbal complaint was made by Mr. Carter that the dirt from the Wayne street grading improvement was being hauled away contrary to the wishes of the property owners. This also was referred to the service board.

A resolution authorizing the board of service to contract with Walter M. Toy for a new city map was passed, under the suspension of the rules.

Special to The Daily News. Helena, Mont., July 26.—Another hearing will be held today in the suit of F. A. Hall against the Yellowstone Park Railroad, which resulted in the appointment of two temporary receivers who are now in charge of the road.

Mr. Hall sued to recover $30,000 alleged to be due him for services, asking for the issuance of a temporary injunction and the appointment of a temporary receiver until the case is finally settled. The court finally decided to name two receivers to take over the property and to operate the road, which extends from Bridger to Bear Creek.

THE NAMELESS SHIP HER LUCKY MISTAKE.

By ANDREW C. EWING.

(Copyright, 1926, by American Press Association.)

"Talk about the flying Dutchman," said the centenarian of the Sailor's Song Harbor, "itwa'n't a circumstance to the phantom ship my gran'father used to tell me about when I was a boy. The old man was pretty nigh as old as I am now when he told it to me and had sailed the Spanish main when pirates there was thicker'n humberbuts about a newly arrived American ship off Faya. And my gran'father seen her, too, with his own two eyes and her wild cap'n on his wild ship. He was the first pirate to kill that's only killin'." But I'll tell you the story as my gran'father told it.

"A ship—my gran'father didn't know her name; fact is, she didn't have a name; some said that, bein' intended for a phantom from the start, she sailed without a name—well, this nameless ship sailed from Medford with a cargo of rum and gold and silver bars. She headed for a West Indian port, but got into the doldrums and was so long without a breeze that the water and provisions give out. The crew was reduced to chewin' the leather of their boots; but, as for water, there was none even to be got from damp out o' the sails. The weakest died first, then the stronger, and so on till the most endurin' o' the crew give in and their spirits went aloft. When the last man had perished, there bein' nothin' more for the doldrum to do, the wind sprung up and the ship sailed away with her crew of dead.

"The wind bein' out o' the northeast, the ship kep' on her course toward the West Indies. Then it was that Juan Castres, the most merciful pirate that ever sailed the Spanish main, saw her and chased her. It was an easy matter to catch her, though every rag was set and she was a fine sailer, for bein' without a helmsman—at least a livin' one—she'd buff now and then and have to wait for her sails to fill again. When the pirate came up with her the dusk of night was settlin' down, and all the pirates could see was a figure behind the wheel, another leanin' up agin' the taffrail and others scattered about in different positions where they'd died.

"But Castres, seein' the ship hadn't guns for defense, drifted up beside her when the wind lulled and, leavin' some of his men to make fast, jumped aboard his prize. The two vessels bumped and separated. At that moment a sudden puff of wind struck 'em. The pirate had lowered most of his sails, and before she could get 'em up again the ship without a name sailed away from her into the thick night, and that's the last the pirate seen o' her.

"The next seen o' the nameless ship was by a Britisher. Cap'n Castres was at the wheel singin' and shoutin' and laughin' and throwin' his arms about. He had found himself alone on a ship with nothin' but dead men, though she was the richest prize he had ever taken, with the easiest cargo to dispose of, gold and silver bars, with rum enough to keep him drunk for the rest of his natural life. Whether drinkin' the rum helped him to go mad or a crew of dead men was enough to do it, nobody didn't know, but he was mad sure enough—stark, starin' mad—swearin' at his dead crew just as though they was alive, and he must have found plenty of ammunition, for he was pluggin' 'em all the while. One o' the sailors on the Britisher recognized Castres, for he had been taken by the pirate, forced to walk the plank and get picked up. He told the cap'n, and the cap'n turned away without even speakin' the other ship.

"The next seen o' the nameless ship, as the Britisher called her, was by an Italian brig. There was more superstition among the Italians than the Englishmen, and, seein' a crew of dead men commanded by a mad pirate, they all knelt on deck and crossed themselves. Then the cap'n, who was the only man among 'em that had any sense at all, took the helm and sailed on another course as quick as he could go about.

"But what I've been a-comin' to all along is the time my gran'father seen the 'phantom,' for after some years sailin' about, seen by various craft, that's what they called her. It was one evenin' on the equator. My gran'father was a young feller o' nineteen an' he'd heard o' 'the nameless,' as she was then called, when he was six years old. So, you see, the story's true. Well, the sun was a-settin', goin' down into the water big enough to take in a dozen craft on the horizon, when suddenly a ship seemed to come up near by, as if out o' the ocean, and sailed right between him and the sun. On deck was Cap'n Castres leanin' over the gunwale shakin' his fat, eyes a-glarin' and horrible sounds comin' out of his throat. The phantom must 'a' rattled consarnin' for, only her ribs was to be seen ag'in the sun, lookin' for all the world like a gridiron on a red-hot fire.

"The phantom always brought bad luck. Ships seen her in the early mornin', at twilight, after sunset, by moonlight or in a storm. She was always scudlin', breeze or no breeze, manned by dead men and steered by the mad pirate. And no ship over sighted her that didn't either have a plague aboard afterward or go ashore or strike a rock or somepin terrible.

"Just go to New Bedford and ask 'em about her. They'll tell you of the women and children of New Bedford crew, bound to be made widows and orphans from shipwreck after 'the phantom' was sighted in a fog off the shore there."

Miss Buckingham took up two notes and read them with a bored expression on her beautiful and aristocratic countenance. Then she threw them down and on her crest stamped paper wrote two replies. One was a declination to a proposal of marriage, the other an invitation for a proposer to call, intimating that he would be accepted. Addressing two envelopes, one to Hamilton Gilha, No. — East Forty-eighth street, the other to George B. Hillars, Union club, city, she laid both notes and envelopes on the desk before her. Then she darkened the room so that she could not see any of them, mixed them, took up one of the notes, put it in one of the envelopes, sealed and stamped it, tore up the other note and envelope, threw the pieces into a wastebasket and sent the other to a mail without looking at the address. Her intention was to remain ignorant of the man she had chosen till he presented himself.

This was a dangerous thing to do, for the reason that Miss Buckingham had a number of suitors, and she wrote an illegible hand. The next evening a card was handed to her bearing the name of G. B. Hillars. She glanced at it, gave a slight shrug, fingered her back hair before a glass and descended the stairs. On entering the drawing room she found a very different man from either of the two to whom she had written.

A great many things flashed through her mind in an infinitely short space of time. First, she had written one of the notes (evidently the one that had been mailed to George B. Hillars, and it had fallen into the hands of Gustavus B. Hillers. This was not remarkable, since both men belonged to the same club. Second, how was she to escape the results of her blunder? Mr. Hillars was one of her many suitors, a sailor she loved and by whom she had supposed herself to have been fitted. Her pride rebelled against admitting that she had sent for him to eat humble pie, and she did not wish him to know that she had intended to accept another.

"Marian!" he said, advancing, but stopped, repelled by her expression. "Marian," he began again, "what does this mean? Have you led me to believe that you had seen your glaring injustice only to give me additional pain?"

"How did you happen to—to get?" "Your letter? I returned today." "No, no; I didn't know you were away. I mean—What right have you to?" She balked again.

"Marian!" he exclaimed. "No, no; I didn't mean that." There was a short pause, after which he said, "When we parted last I told you that I could not brook—" "Brook! It was I who could not." "You? The objectionable words were spoken to me."

"What words?" "What words? Why, in reference to that note I wrote you to which you declined to reply. I sent another asking for the cause of your silence. You replied that you would not address a note to a man at his club because a friend of yours had done so and her note had been shown to others."

"And do you mean to tell me that a trivial thing like that caused you to refrain from favoring me at the next cocktail?"

"A trivial thing like that?"

"Yes. Shouldn't I have profited by my friend's experience?" He stood looking at her in astonishment.

"Then the next time," she added, "I met you on the street you didn't speak to me."

"How could I when you walked by me with your—without looking at me?"

"Judging from your previous treatment of me, I supposed you intended to cut me."

"Did you expect me to bow to your shadow? Could I speak to a girl who would not even look at me?"

"You men are so!"

"So what?"

"Frustrating."

"Anything else?"

"Stupid."

There was a long silence, which was broken by the man: "I believe you are right. I've been stupid. There is something about the feminine makeup that renders a woman oblivious to the frightful imputations she casts upon a man. You argued that, because some contemptible cad had betrayed a confidence, under the same circumstances an honorable man would do the same."

Miss Buckingham was silent. A faint glimmer of the fallacy of the syllogism began to dawn upon her.

"I suppose I ought to apologize," she said, "but I'm not going to do it after the way you treated me."

"My apology would be in order after, not before, yours."

"I prefer it should come first and mine shouldn't come at all."

"If I will agree to do all the apologizing will this nonsense that has been so long between us be obliterated?"

"I suppose so."

"And our former status will be renewed?"

"If you promise not to do so any more."

"Very well. I apologize for both. But what in the world did you mean by sending for me with no idea of a reconciliation?"

"I didn't. Not caring whom I married so long as you had treated me so badly, I sent the note to George Hillars. You got it."

"Great heavens! What a close shave!"

An Awkward Text. A butcher of a certain village, being a devout Christian, whenever he sent a business note invariably accompanied it with a text.

A certain lady, wishing him to kill some of her pigs, sent him a letter to notify him of the fact, to which he sent the following reply:

"Dear Madam—I will call on Friday to kill your hogs without fail. Yours Mr. B. N. R."

$352,707.00 DEPOSITED AT FIVE PER CENT. SAFE, SECURE, CONVENIENT FOR SAVINGS AND DEPOSITS. Nine years ago the Lima Home & Savings association began paying 5 per cent for deposits in any amount with privilege of compound interest. On account of the safe and secure manner in which such deposits have been handled, many people of large and small means, have accepted the very liberal opportunity of having their funds invested at a rate that is worth while, until nearly $353,000.00 have accumulated earning 5 per cent. These deposits are used by this Association only for loans on city and farm homes in Lima and vicinity. Nothing but first mortgages are taken to secure these loans; ample insurance is required for the Association's protection, as well as frequent reduction of principal.

Another feature of safety is the annual examination by state authority to which this Association is subjected. The last examination was completed on the 20th of May, 1926, and included an investigation of all of the Association's investments and securities.

All persons with money to lay by at the liberal rate this Association has been paying for many years, who are seeking a place where safety, security and convenience are in every transaction of its business, are invited to its office in the Masonic Building, west of the post-office, Lima, Ohio.

OF THE SUNNY SOUTH MUST RIDE ON SIDE SADDLES

IF THE NEW BILL INTRODUCED BY SENATOR WRIGHT BECOMES ENACTED.

Special to the Daily News. Atlanta, Ga., July 27.—In future women will not be permitted to ride astride in Georgia, if a bill introduced Monday by Senator Wright, of Stewart county, becomes a law. The bill provides that no girl over 12 years of age shall be permitted to ride astride upon the highway or in any other public place, upon any "horse, mule, ass or other animal."

It does not prohibit female circus riders from riding astride in any enclosed show ground or under a circus tent.

Violation is punishable by fine and imprisonment. Wright is a physician and says the bill is introduced by the doctors of Georgia, who claim that riding astride is injurious to women.

BEWARE OF OINTMENTS FOR CATARRH THAT CONTAIN MERCURY

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. INJURIES

Which Were Received By Doctor D. H. Sullivan

WILL CAUSE HIM TO BE CONFINED TO HIS HOME FOR SEVERAL DAYS.

CAUSE OF THE WRECK IS NOT YET LEARNED

MOST OF THE VICTIMS HAVE BEEN STARTED HOMEWARD FROM INDIANAPOLIS.

Dr. D. H. Sullivan, the well known dentist who was injured in the wreck that occurred on the Big Four road at Zionsville, northwest of Indianapolis Sunday afternoon, arrived home last night, coming to this city over the C. & D. road from Sidney. He is suffering severely from the bruises he sustained when the car in which he was riding left the rails and landed on its side against an embankment, his left foot and leg being so badly bruised that he will be unable to walk for several days.

Dr. Sullivan states that he was thrown across the aisle of the car when it lurched from the rails, and several of the other passengers in the car were thrown on top of him. He did not realize at first how badly he was injured and gave his attention, first, to aiding in the rescue of the other passengers, including several ladies who were in the same car. As soon as he received the attention of a physician he was removed to the hospital in Indianapolis but remained there only twenty-four hours, preferring to nurse his injuries at his own home in this city. His friends will be pleased to learn that his injuries will not be permanent and that he will probably be able to be about again in a few days. He speaks in the highest terms of praise of the prompt and excellent care which the victims of the wreck received at the hands of the Big Four company officials and the hospital surgeons and nurses.

CAUSE OF WRECK. Cannot Be Determined by Officials of the Big Four Road.

Special to the Daily News. Indianapolis, July 27.—Despite investigation, H. F. Houghton, general superintendent of the Big Four, was unable to determine the cause of the accident at Zionsville, Sunday.

"I spent the entire day looking over the scene and talking to our men," said Houghton, "and I am at a loss to explain the cause. It is evident that something was on the tracks, but what it was and where it came from I don't know."

"The engine was found to be in good shape and the mechanics do not think anything dropped from it. A brake beam or something may have fallen from a previous train and the locomotive may have kicked it in front of the mail car."

"The track near Zionsville was in excellent shape," the superintendent continued, "and I am convinced the cause will not be found in the roadway."

WRECK VICTIMS In Indianapolis Hospitals are Recovering and None Will Die.

Special to the Daily News. Indianapolis, July 27.—All of the victims of the Big Four fast passenger train wreck Sunday afternoon at Zionsville, are doing nicely.

It is expected that those who were brought to hospitals here will be able to leave within a day or two.

Mrs. Magnolia Miles, of Knoxville, Tenn., who was thought to have been fatally injured, is recovering at the home of a physician at Zionsville, and is expected to be able to leave today.

LEXINGTON COUPLE Injured in Big Four Wreck, Unable To Return Home.

Special to the Daily News. Lexington, Ky., July 27.—Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Gould, who were among the injured in the Big Four wreck at Zionsville, Ind., Sunday afternoon, are residents of this city. Mr. Gould is the chief clerk in the Queen and Crescent railway freight office there. The condition of Mrs. Gould, who has a broken collar bone and internal injuries, will, according to a telegram from Zionsville, prevent the return of the couple to this city for a week or ten days.

OHIO MAN Injured in Missouri Wreck Discharged From Hospital.

Special to the Daily News. Kansas City, Mo., July 27.—Jacob Steinfeld, of Cleveland, O., and H. E. Hall, of Montgomery, Mo., who were among the 29 persons injured in the wreck of the Continental Limited on the Wabash railroad near
